Praise

Praise (Şükür) is known as expressing thanks, appreciation, and satisfaction. People express gratitude when they feel pleased about something. In other words, they express their gratitude by giving thanks. In Sufism, the term Şükür (Praise) is described as knowing and spreading the goodness done to you, praising the one who did good with their goodness, and being grateful.

It is believed that those who express gratitude will have a better future. Gratitude expresses that even the smallest blessing is valuable. In Sufi culture, Mevlana emphasizes the importance of Şükür (Praise) and giving by saying, "Sharing blessings is the essence of gratitude." He also emphasizes that "the bowl of the one whose eyes are never satisfied will never be full." This product was created by interpreting the designs on the metal bowl known as the "aid cup" or "keşköl" used in Mevlevism at the Mevlana Museum."

Memento

COLLECTION

Memento (Yadigar) is a Turkish term used for objects that remind us of a person or event. This word is used not only for humans, but also for objects and generally represents important memories and values.

The second meaning of Memento is gift or precious souvenir. During the Ottoman Empire, a special sword ceremony was held for the newly enthroned sultans and the princes sent to govern provinces. During these ceremonies, the sultans and princes would wear a special sword passed down from their ancestors or prophets. These swords were not just weapons, but also a memento and a symbolic object. The designs on these products were inspired by motifs on an original sword said to have been passed down from Osman Gazi.

It is made of mouth blown crystal glass, the design pattern is engraved meticulously by our craftspeople using various techniques, then is being hand painted with 24k gold and platinum.

Honor

COLLECTION

Honor (Paye) is a Turkish word that means “step”, “degree”, “level”, “status” or “rank”, while philosophically it represents the progress and advancement of individuals by learning from the difficulties they encounter throughout their lives. In the Ottoman Palaces, jewelry workshops were places where this understanding was applied. The master craftsmen working in the palace workshops were given apprenticeship, journeyman, and master ranks respectively. The decorations used in the production of cups, pitchers, dishes, clocks, and tobacco boxes in Ottoman jewelry art were the works of these palace jewelers who had received the rank of master. This product was created by interpreting the designs on the golden ceremonial jug made by the craftsmen during the reign of Sultan II. Selim in the 16th and 17th centuries, which is a part of the Ottoman Empire’s treasury, on display at the Topkapı Palace Museum.

Grace

COLLECTION

The word Grace (tebrik) in Turkish means “blessing” or “celebration.” Throughout history, in addition to national and local celebrations, greetings have also held significant importance during religious holidays. In the Ottoman Empire, special ceremonies were organized both in the palace and among the people for important holidays.

The ceremony of greeting the Sultan in the palace was called “muayede alay” or “resm-i muayede.” During these ceremonies, people from the tradesmen and public sectors would participate in processions, and skilled individuals would showcase their talents to entertain the Sultan.

A notable aspect of the holiday greetings was the presentation of illuminated books, featuring intricate designs, to the Ottoman Sultan. These designs were created by sprinkling gold particles onto the dried ink of zer ink with a brush, resulting in tiny golden droplets. This product is inspired by the title and page-end illumination motifs of a congratulatory book (tebrik name) dating back to the 14th-15th century, written by the Mevlevi poet Yusuf Emir-i and currently exhibited at the Turkish and Islamic Arts Museum.

Glass Palace

COLLECTION

During the reign of Fatih Sultan Mehmet (1472-1473), in the heart of Istanbul, in the Topkapi Palace's first courtyard, masterpieces of Turkish tile art were exhibited in this magnificent palace.

Tiles are ceramic products with a shiny surface covered with a glassy substance called glaze. This palace, which was covered with tiles, was named "Sırça Köşk" or Glass Palace in English.

The palace has five rooms and houses some of the most exquisite examples of Iznik tiles. The tiles of the Sırça Köşk are so remarkable that they later served as an example for the tiles in the Safavid Palaces in Iran. These tiles not only carry an aesthetic meaning but also a philosophical one. The term Sırça Köşk carries the meanings of protection, creating our own world within ourselves, and isolation. This product was created by interpreting the 15th-century Topkapi Palace Sırça Köşk tiles and designs.

It is made of mouth blown crystal glass, the design pattern is engraved meticulously by our craftspeople using various techniques, then is being hand painted with 24k gold and platinum.

Girdle

COLLECTION

In the Ottoman era, gold, silver, and precious gemstone-adorned belts were used in weddings and ceremonies. Especially in the 18th century, silver belt buckles made in the Ottoman Empire featured an exquisite design with raised engravings of tulips and spring flowers on a gilded silver background, combining the artistry of ajoure and engraving techniques.

The junctions where the buckle meets the belt depicted delicate filigree buds using ajoure craftsmanship. Inspired by a belt buckle dating back to the reign of Sultan Mustafa III (1757), this product is handcrafted from limited quantities of glass. All the relief patterns are meticulously created using 24-carat gold plating and platinum, showcasing exceptional craftsmanship.

It is made of mouth blown crystal glass, the design pattern is engraved meticulously by our craftspeople using various techniques, then is being hand painted with 24k gold and platinum.
